

SENSE ON THE EDGE

Reconnecting with Nature

Our evolving menu at Sense on the Edge is an expression of both time and place. Absorbing the environment, the surrounding nature, and seasonal ingredients from the region including wild plants or everyday life's offerings, matching the atmosphere, and flavors reminiscent of a particular season. Sense on the Edge Kaiseki experience is the embodiment of passionate hospitality where you can enjoy contemporary Asian cuisine with a strong emphasis on Japanese & Southeast Asian influences. Its central tenet is to convey respect, making you feel special while our Chef becomes your storyteller. Telling you a story in a natural, fun, and clever way. The food is influenced by the Chef's personal and life-changing experiences throughout our Chef's travels.

Organic/Biodynamic Wine

Organic viticulture seeks to improve the vineyard's soil with the natural animals' resources of the environment to increase the health and disease resistance of the vine. It refuses fertilizer, fungicides, and pesticides. Biodynamic viticulture includes organic practices but also incorporates philosophy and cosmology.

Vegan Wine

The point that dividing the wine to be Vegan instead of to be no Vegan is during the process called Fining. Wine after fermentation is hazy and need to go under clarification to have appetible appearance and at this point the winemaker can use or Fining agent from animals' protein like egg white or from vegetables like legumes, in the latter case the wine will become Vegan.

Traditional Method

This method is considered the most expensive for its long procedure made by second fermentation in the bottles for at the least 9 months where most of the champagne are on the lees minimum 12 months, during this time the sugar and the yeast inside will produce the Co2 that will be dissolve in the wine and create the foam and bubbles and the flavours characteristics of pastry and biscuit. With this method we can find many other wines like Crémant, Franciacorta and Cava.

Champagne

Is the King of Sparkling Wines ...?

Although many sparkling wines are made by the famous methode traditionnelle, they do not have the quality and elegance of the best Champagne. Please remember that Champagne is a sparkling wine made in the Champagne region, if it is not made in the Champagne region, it cannot be called Champagne.

The different grape varieties used in Champagne production are Chardonnay, Pinot Noir and Pinot Meunier. All champagnes are recognized for their specific taste; the better houses have hundreds of years of experience in blending Champagnes. A typical blend of grapes might be Chardonnay, Pinot Noir, and Pinot Meunier, however, there are many secrets surrounding blending recipes and production methods.
